Title of painting: "Sunrise at Kapoho" This was from a photo from my Kahuna Serge Kahili Hill...great Aloha!

WHO, HOW, AND WHAT?

Everyday is Earth Day and today is May Day!

May 1 is the Celtic Beltane or May Day. This is a celebration of early summer in the agricultural world, saying YES to fertility of nature and an abundant harvest. Dancing by bonfires, and around the maypole are spring fertility rituals living in folk traditions. The maypole is decorated with flowers and streamers and dancing around this festive pole marks the beginning of spring.

Since early times Celts have celebrated two days that are 6 months apart... Beltane and Samhain...both days hold "magic" happening between our "real world" and the world of "spirit".

The tradition of leaving May flower baskets at the doors of loved ones and neighbors used to be what we did in our community when I was a child. This was such fun to receive and give a basket of sweets and flowers!

Now, May Day is also known as International Workers Day...a day of protest as well as care-free frolic of times gone by. What a combo!

Personally, I choose May Day as a sweet day to put Winter in the rear view mirror and welcome springtime with open arms and blessings. Happy May Day to you!

Some fun and useful welcome Spring "links"!

Maybe you can "spot" an interesting dog for some smiles, oooooo, and ahhs today. I know many folks both contribute and enjoy the Facebook page for Dog Spotting! Go to Facebook and check out this site: <https://www.facebook.com/DogSpotting?fref=ts> All you dog paparazzi out there, get your camera out or just plain share some fun dog watching!

Another great product to explore for YOU would be "Proper Soap". An associate of mine is offering her wonderful soap that actually funds clean water and sanitation infrastructure: www.ProperSoap.com From soap to candles, as you purchase, you are giving back to mother earth via Proper Soap's partnership with <http://www.ide-org.org/>

If you live in or around Los Angeles (there are similar sites like this for other towns as well), or are planning a visit...and want to find out anything "real estate", what's happening in the community, environment, info, etc. go to an interesting site: <http://la.curbed.com/>

Animals and spring! Time to shed that winter coat and that means "defuzzing" and hairballs! I LOVE the KONG Zoom Groom products. My two cats go into kitty heaven as they are brushed (and massaged...the flexible long "finger cones" are great!) every AM. You really DO need to brush your animals every day so they do not get their insides all stuck up with fur. Fur balls in cats (and dogs!) can cause emergency vet visits that are quite serious! Find the Zoom Groom KONG at Amazon, local pet stores, all over. You can join the KONG connect that sends you discounts, etc. by going to: <http://www.kongcompany.com/connect/sign-up-for-kong-connect/>

SPRING: be sure to always get some custom work done for essences at this time... give me a call Makana Cat out on Adventure! to set up an essence read!

WHERE?

Time to enjoy the beauty all around where I live. Spent some time at Laguna Beach with a bird friend and of course my favorite Huna book to read. And, also spent time giving school kids a good "connection to nature at Ballona Wetlands here in Los Angeles. A great place for helping mother earth with sand dune and migratory environment for all the "natives" living with "city" all around. Go to: <http://www.ballonafriends.org/>
